Your Voice. Your Belonging. Our Future.

Introduction

My name is Tomisona Arole, and I'm running for Vice President of Equality and Belonging at Ulster University. I believe in the power of a truly inclusive community, where every student, regardless of their background or identity, feels valued, heard, and supported.

If elected, here are some of the key changes I'll work towards:

Championing Diversity: I promise to ensure Ulster actively celebrates its diverse cultures and identities, promoting inclusivity and bringing students together to build a stronger, connected community. I will also work to ensure these spaces will be accessible and welcoming for all.

Strengthen Peer-Led Support

Networks: I pledge to advocate for expanding safe spaces and peer-led networks for international, LGBTQ+, mature, and other underrepresented students, offering support and opportunities to connect and share experiences.

Amplify Marginalised Voices: Every student's voice matters, and I'm committed to working with student networks to elevate the voices of marginalised groups, ensuring their perspectives influence decisions at every level, from student life to university policy.

Enhance Accessibility Across

Campuses: I will work to ensure that campus spaces, resources, and events are truly accessible, pushing for improvements in the digital learning environment, such as ensuring lecture materials are fully accessible and creating clearer guidelines for lecturers on inclusive teaching methods.

Engage Beyond Campuses: Inclusion and equality don't stop at Ulster University. I aim to build partnerships with local organisations and participate in national campaigns to advocate for student rights, inclusion, and social justice, making Ulster a leader in inclusivity and empowerment.
